

General George Crook, guided by a Giles Union sympathizer, led his army through Gap and Salt Pond Mountains to safety in Monroe County, West Virginia. After the Civil War, Crook served on the western frontier among the hostile Indian tribes. (Photo courtesy of the National Archives).